Frank,

I was able to track down Colonel Folger. He said that once a guide submits paperwork, it sits at ADF&G waiting to be entered into the system, sometimes for up to a year. So although the hunt that resulted in the clients being overlimit for black bear occurred in spring 2006, the violation went unnoticed for quite a while until the hunt report was entered into a computer. At that point, an investigation started. In the course of the investigation, the troopers also examined the paperwork for the October 2005 hunt and discovered Jeremiah's paperwork violation. Please call if you need any more information.

723-2109.

Governor & Mike:

Just a quick update to follow on the last Cabinet meeting, in DOA we are looking to see how we can reach out to rural communities more effectively. In short, when I ran the clinic in Cold Bay, I had no idea I could have purchased medical supplies and EMT radios through the State's contracts. Working with DCED, we're going to get the word out to communities about savings; and look to the long-term with regional co-ops (you can see the list of issues in the email below).

I made contact with DCED Deputy Director Mike Black this morning. He seemed excited about the possibilities and had some great ideas to help us get our message out. We've had a good story to tell for quite some time about how we can assist communities lower their purchase prices for a number of goods, and even have presentations ready to deliver, but we've struggled in reaching a rural audience. We're meeting today with Community Advocacy Director Tara Jollie and two of her rural services experts.

Subject: Rural Community Outreach

This is a follow-up to our discussion August 9th regarding outreach to rural communities and businesses.

I've met with staff several times to discuss ideas and options. We're working on two tracks – one to educate businesses in rural communities on how to be successful in doing business with the state and winning state contracts, and one to reach out to qualified political subdivisions to educate them on the contracts we have available that can save their communities' money and administrative costs.

Here's what we have done or planned so far:

* Staff are compiling lists of potential users and groups specific to each contract we have (DGS established and WSCA/NASPO/MMCAP)

* Staff are investigating organizations and associations those users may belong to (AML, Association of Fire Chiefs, etc.) and what options there are to market to them (attending annual meetings, newsletters, mailing or email lists)

* Meeting with DCED Community Advocacy Director Tara Jollie set for 8/23 to get her ideas on the best ways to reach and communicate with potential contract users and business owners, and what DCED can do to assist us

* "Quasi" state agencies (AK Railroad, ASMI, AHFC, UofA, etc.) will be contacted to see if there is an opportunity to offer contracts they have established to rural governments

* Update our "How to do Business with the State" booklet to make sure it's appropriate for the rural audience

* Work has begun on scripts for two short instructional video presentations (one for poli-subs, one for businesses) to be placed on websites and/or put on CDs for distribution

* Modifications to the DGS "Buying the Good Stuff" training session are being made with the rural political subdivisions in mind

* We are also exploring what GSA and other states are doing in this area for ideas that might be appropriate in Alaska

* I've instructed staff that our standard practice should be to sign up for all available WSCA and NASPO contracts instead of only signing for those that a State agency has voiced an interest in Another, longer term idea we're pursuing is the formation of an in-state buyer's group or cooperative. We believe that the efforts mentioned above will help us develop a good list of candidates to include in such a cooperative.

I'll keep you posted as we make progress on these projects.
